Presented at “Promoting Harmony in a World of Conflicts”:
An International Conference on Social Work and Counseling Practice
June 3, 2009

The objectives of this presentation are (1) to introduce methods to help practitioners build a knowledge base for practice evaluation; and (2) to help practitioners determine which methods to use for evaluating their own practice(s); (3) to identify the connectedness among various evaluation approaches. In the presentation, a single system design method will be described to systematically address the clinical practice process, and six additional evaluation methods will be introduced for macro and community-based practice evaluation.
